

T ToneFreak Records brings guitar music back to Australia and also welcomes well-known Australian guitar icon and virtuoso Brett Garsed to its distribution roster...

It is a new era for guitar music in Australia!

Tone-Freak Records is committed to guitarists and getting their music heard. Having successfully marketed and promoted newcomer Bill Palmer's album "Outlines" and receiving airplay on many national and international radio stations, ToneFreak Records has decided to branch out and also act as a distributor for other guitar instrumentalists and as such are pleased to welcome Australian guitar legend Brett Garsed who, amongst other things, is a long-standing member of John Farnham's band and a regular member of the "Dancing with the Stars" house band.

Over the last 5 years especially, we have seen interactive games like Playstation's "Guitar Hero" arrive on the scene and achieve monumental sales because, let's face it, everyone loves the concept of a guitar hero! What's not to like?

Australia however has not seen a mainstream commercially accepted guitar hero since Tommy Emmanuel left our shores for the bright lights of the USA. ToneFreak Records wants to change this!

A & R Manager, Alison says "Country and language are no barrier with guitar music - it is purely open to interpretation and what I love about this genre is that the music can be so emotive and expressive, it can mean something totally personal to you because there are no lyrics to dictate what the songs have to or should mean"
